

COVID-19 RESPONSE PLAN: UPDATE 46

3 September 2021

First few days of Alert Level 3, and it feels like a small amount of normality is coming back into our lives. Field staff are busy completing full work schedules and preparing for the week ahead. A couple of our gardeners even managed to get photographed by the Otago Daily Times yesterday – great to see you guys out in the community! For our staff still working from home, work life may not have changed much – but if you're anything like me, you may have indulged in a few takeaway treats!

There's not much to cover off in today's update, other than keeping to the Level 3 work pack guidance and chipping away at the work coming our way. It is important to make sure that everyone is still keeping in touch – preferably by technology, as we don't want to congest worksites or hallways at the moment and keeping a 2-metre distance from those outside of your work bubble is still a requirement.

As I'm sure you're all waiting for – Monday afternoon the Government will announce our next steps as a country. This will determine how we move forward as a business. Evidently, we seem pretty well versed in adapting to the situation as it arises, so I'm confident that whatever transition we have to make (if there is a transition), we'll be fine.

Please remember to stay safe and be kind. I hope you all have a great weekend! I'll push out another update after the Government announcement on Monday - so stay tuned.

Regards
